| If the configuration file (config.ini by default) does not exist or is not in the specified path, the config.read(config_path) line will not raise an error, but any subsequent attempts to access keys in the configuration file will. |            |                 |            |
| If the expected keys (like imageWidthPx, imageWidthCm, etc.) are not found in the configuration file, the methods will raise a KeyError.                                                                                                |            |                 |            |
| If the values in the configuration file are not of the expected format (e.g., a non-numeric value for imageWidthPx), the type conversion (like int() or float()) will raise a ValueError.                                               |            |                 |            |
